Object: Between Brain and Culture:

What holds together the various fields that are supposed to constitute the general intellectual discipline that people now call cognitive science In this book Erneling and Johnson identify two problems with defining this discipline First some theorists identify the common subject matter as the mind but scientists and philosophers have not been able to agree on any single satisfactory answer to the question of what the mind is Second those who speculate about This is an unusually cogent book whose editors look beyond the accepted disciplinary structures of cognitive science to the environment and human culture in order to examine mind Erneling and Johnson succeed admirably in exploring the alternative of the
