Objects and Persons:

With ontology motivated largely by causal considerations this lucid and provocative work focuses on the idea that physical objects are causally non redundant Merricks eliminates inanimate composite macrophysical objects on the grounds that they would if they existed be at best completely causally redundant He defends human existence by arguing from certain facts about mental causation that we cause things that are not determined by our proper parts He also prov Merricks advances an interesting and forceful argument for this asymmetry between real living things and alleged non living things one with which anyone working on material constitution will have to grapple The of Metaphysics With style
