Mindvaults: Sociocultural Grounds for Pretending and Imagining (MIT Press):

The human mind has the capacity to vault over the realm of current perception motivation emotion and action to leap consciously and deliberately to past or future possible or impossible abstract or concrete scenarios and situations In this book Radu Bogdan examines the roots of this uniquely human ability which he terms mindvaulting He focuses particularly on the capacities of pretending and imagining which he identifies as the first forms of mindva By bringing together advances in the philosophy of mind with recent psychological theories of mental development Radu Bogdan offers an original and promising explanation of human s most distinctive form of competence the imagination David Olson Universit
