Constitution of Selves:

1 of 1 review helpful the narrative solution to the concept of self By William S Jamison This book is essentially two halves with the first a critique of analytic philosophy approaches to the explanation of the self and the second to an exposition of the narrative view of the self which Marya Schechtman supports as effectively answering the problems set by the analytic views The first half describes the problems of definin An amnesia victim asking Who am I means something different from a confused adolescent asking the same question Marya Schechtman takes issue with analytic philosophy s emphasis on the first sort of question to the exclusion of the second The problem of personal identity she suggests is usually understood to be a question about historical life What she calls the reidentification question is taken to be the real metaphysical question of personal identity whereas This excellent and engaging book succeeds in raising questions about the dominant approach to asking questions about our identities and our concern for the future as well as in offering the beginnings of an alternative way to ask and answer such questi
